Sustainability

Single-use plastics are one of the most significant environmental issues of the world.

On the other hand, disposable products are most likely suited to recycling in nature. Multi-use products – which are made of recyclable materials – are a great way to reduce waste and diminish plastic use.

As Europe Packaging, we produce recyclable multi-use products, which are the best substitution for plastics to contribute to sustainability and save our planet.

Sustainability and Recycling

By increasingly using sustainable materials as packaging material - and this from the start of the production chain - our customers and we contribute to the circular economy.

We help to select and propose more sustainable packaging by offering alternative packaging material.

Our focus is increasingly on renewable materials, biodegradable and compostable packaging. For example, we critically examine the ecological footprint and the environmental impact that packaging has.

Classic packaging is increasingly making way for recyclable packaging. Our objective is to support the transition from a linear to a circular economy by including as many "end of life" materials in our production process as possible.

In this way, we contribute to reducing waste production and improving our climate.
